University Purpose

Our History

Texas A&M University-Commerce began as East Texas Normal College in 1889 when founder William Leonidas Mayo opened the doors to a one-building campus in Cooper. After the original campus was destroyed by fire in 1894, Professor Mayo moved the college 16 miles to Commerce, Texas to take advantage of westward railroad lines to Dallas and other parts of the state. His creed, which continues today, was "ceaseless industry, fearless investigation, unfettered thought and unselfish service to others." The State of Texas took over the campus in 1917 and the name was changed to East Texas State Normal College. In 1923, the school was renamed East Texas State Teachers College. The graduate program was added in 1935, and in 1957 the Legislature, recognizing that the purpose of the institution had broadened from teacher education, changed the name to East Texas State College. Following the inauguration of the first doctoral program in 1962, the name was changed once more to East Texas State University. The name change to Texas A&M University-Commerce occurred in 1996, when the university joined The Texas A&M University System. Today, the University meets the undergraduate, graduate, and professional needs of the citizens of Northeast Texas and beyond through its main campus in Commerce, various off-campus instructional sites, and state-of-the-art distance learning. Its mission is achieved through teaching, scholarship, and service activities on its campuses, and in the community and region. Over the past few decades, the University has grown in both stature and student population, significantly expanding its foundations.

Characteristics

Located only 60 miles northeast of the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex, A&M-Commerce offers a small-town atmosphere ideal for living, learning, teaching, and research. As one of the largest members of the prestigious Texas A&M University System, A&M-Commerce is home to approximately 12,000 students, more than 130 degree programs, six academic colleges, and two schools.

The majority of students attending the University are Texas residents, many coming from the counties surrounding A&M-Commerce. There are five off-campus teaching sites in the DFW Metroplex and beyond. Known for its care of and support for its students, A&M Commerce also attracts many students from out-of-state who are enrolled in online degree programs as well as more than 500 international students. The founder of East Texas Normal College, William L. Mayo, was committed to providing affordable educational opportunities to first-generation college students. A&M-Commerce was recently recognized as having the "Most Military Friendly" online master's program. The University has a large number of graduate programs for a university of its size. Student access and success are the hallmarks of the University. A&M-Commerce is recognized as a pioneer, innovator, and leader in distance education.

Velma K. Waters Library

Facility

Located in the center of the Texas A&M University-Commerce campus, the Velma K. Waters Library (main campus) occupies five floors and 120,853 square feet of the library building. The library has 495 seats and users have access to 29 study rooms and 122 networked desktop computers. The library provides 72 laptops available for student checkout, multimedia equipment, 2 KIC scanners, and 3 black/white and color copy machines. An account management kiosk for university Lion Cards is also located in the library.

In addition to housing the physical collections, the library also provides space to the Academic Success Center, Student Disability Services, Office of Career Development, College of Innovation and Design, Assistive Technology Lab, and Starbucks for the university community. The total square footage of the space partners is 14,040 sq. ft. The library is open a total of 111 hours, 7 days a week. During final exams week, the library provides additional extended hours by staying open 24 hours a day.

Instruction

The library offers a variety of instructional services aimed at teaching users how to find, select and evaluate appropriate print and electronic resources, develop effective search strategies, correctly cite sources to avoid plagiarism, and recognize the social implications of information, as it pertains to information and copyright literacy. Librarians are available for individual and group consultations by phone, email, chat, in-person, and video conferencing. Librarians regularly provide course specific instruction sessions and online guides (LibGuides) for the campus and remote instruction sites. Librarians are available during all operating hours and monitor the virtual help desk on weekends and during holidays. Appointments may also be scheduled with individual librarians for one-on-one research assistance. In addition, a team of systems librarians are available to provide advanced technical support to all library patrons during operating hours in-person, via phone, and email. Further, each college and academic department has a librarian designated as a departmental liaison to assist faculty in building collections to support their instructional and research needs. Faculty and student requests for new materials may be placed via the department liaison or through an online request form.

Collections

The library's collection includes over 304,000 print books, 255,000 online journals, 938,685 eBooks, and 294 research databases.

Access

Access to the print collection, including course reserves, is available during operating hours. Faculty, staff, and students may check out library materials using their A&M-Commerce campus ID. The Library's electronic resources are available on a 24/7 basis from anywhere in the world to all A&M-Commerce faculty, staff, and students. All students enrolled in classes of all delivery methods and at any off-campus instructional site are able to access the Library's extensive collection of online materials, including e-Books, journals, and research databases 24 hours per day, 7 days a week. Access is provided via the Library's website at <http://www.tamuc.edu/library> (<http://www.tamuc.edu/library/>).

Interlibrary Loan and Document Delivery

In support of undergraduate and graduate programs, the library offers interlibrary loan services, which provides users with access to books, journals, and articles not available in the collection, from other libraries throughout the United States. Document delivery services provide free electronic delivery of articles and book chapters from the Library's print collection to A&M-Commerce faculty, staff, and students. Books and other library materials can also be delivered to the home address of members of the university community. Materials are shipped via USPS and include a return-address and pre-paid postage. Eligible users must complete an online form for materials they wish to request via interlibrary loan and document delivery.

Consortia

A TexShare Card provides A&M-Commerce faculty, students, and staff with access to print collections at public and academic libraries in Texas, as supplementary resources to the Library collection. The Library also participates in the Texas A&M University System Libraries, Greater Western Library Alliance, and TexShare consortia to negotiate research database purchases, increasing access to informational resources.
